MEMORANDUM FOR: Deputy Director of Central Intelligence

FROM: John N. McMahon
Executive DirectorSUBJECT: Items for Next Haig Breakfast For Your Information Only

1. NODIS cable traffic. It is obvious that the Department of State has reduced drastically the Agency's access to NODIS cables. The attached papers from [] well tell the story. Additionally, Enders informed [] that he had a considerable number of NODIS cables which he would forward over to us. A month has passed and we still do not have them. The NODIS cables not only contain a good deal of intelligence information, but also provide insight into local affairs around the world which permit our analysts to place certain events in proper perspective.

2. Technology Transfer--Bottleneck at State. It's unfortunate we have to name names, but [] at State really is not with it when it comes to recognizing technology transfer as a problem. The attached paper prepared by [] identifies the "root of the problem."
